Coleman Congratulates Trail on Allan Cup Victory

Canadians Plan With View to Having Allan Cup Team

President Gardner and Executive Urge General Support of Local Organizations and Public Lively discussion has been in progress concerning next season's hockey team. The executive knows from experience that gate fees alone will not finance a team. Over $1,000 above gate receipts was required during the season just closed to pay expenses. The booster club receipts served this purpose.

Next season, if players are to be retained who will have a chance to proceed into the play-downs, possibly more money than what was raised this season will be required. It will require united support, by a grant from the council and, it has been suggested, by a contribution of 25c per month by all who desire to give Canadians a sporting chance to win the Allan Cup.

At present the executive is sponsoring a drive to raise funds by means of a draw for a Chesterfield Suite, a Refrigerator and season tickets for games. The objective is to raise at least a reserve of $2,000 before next season opens. Other means will have to be devised in addition to present plans. It is likely that four new players will have to be secured during the summer.

Must Maintain Pressure for Hard-Surfaced Highway

Car Owners of Crows Nest Pass Towns Justified in Demanding Immediate Action in This Area

Mayor Pattinson will endeavor to secure co-operation of municipal organizations in the Crows Nest Pass to keep on pressing the provincial government to hard-surface the highway. Continued pressure by all is the only way in which ultimate action will be secured in this district. Promises to do this and that by representatives in the legislature count for little. Only decisive action by the automobile owners of the Crows Nest Pass will bring action. Too much of the licence fees and gasoline tax is being used for other purposes than highways.

MAKING CANADA

A BETTER PLACE IN WHICH TO LIVE AND WORK
A Series of Letters from Distinguished Canadians on Vital Problems Affecting the Future Welfare of Canada
Specially Written for Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association

Dear George:

It is very difficult to answer your letter as I would like to answer it when I have as yet been able to give it only a few moments' thought. May I say that I like the way you are tackling the new job in striking out at once to get some dominant and constructive note relating to the activities of your fellows of the weekly press. Their influence I would think is the most powerful influence in this country and so could be a great factor for good or evil. I think they are nearer to their constituents than any one else, except possibly the physician and the clergyman, but they have the advantage over these two of speaking regularly and at some length to all their people.

Because of the little thought I have given the matter, I hesitate to make any suggestions, but I think that if on the spur of the moment I had to urge some programme upon them I would urge that they use all their influence to incite in the people of their communities a real sense of citizenship. It seems to me that Canadians, probably like people of other countries, have not developed this sense in the full. By this sense of citizenship I mean a consciousness of the privileges we enjoy as members of a democracy with a full appreciation of the responsibilities which those privileges entail. I mean also a local patriotism of an intense and pure character, but second in intensity to a national patriotism. I think Canada by reason of geographical circumstance, with barriers such as the thin strip between Quebec and the Maritimes, the waste dividing Ontario from the prairies and the towering mountains between the prairie and British Columbia might be more vulnerable than more compactly arranged and densely settled countries to the development of sectionalism, and frankly I don't see how this country is ever going to get anywhere unless cohesion is developed to a greater extent than has prevailed in the past, except in times of national emergency.

I readily see that this prescription of mine is not an easy one—even if I were a doctor—to advocate through a press which must be acutely "location-conscious." But I really do not see that there should be any real conflict between the two patriotisms, local and national. I firmly believe that the proper interest in local problems can be expanded into a constructive interest in national problems.

With the improvement in communications, with the linking up of the country by fast air services, with radio, and with better and more complete news services available to your press, I think many influences are at work to promote this better sense of national citizenship.

I won't worry you any further. I heartily regret I could not have written to you sooner, as I feel pretty confident that even if there were any "useful" interest to you in this letter it will reach you too late to be of use.

I do appreciate the compliment implied by your writing me in this connection and I extend to you my heartiest wishes for a successful year. If this reaches you before you go to the convention I hope you will remember me kindly to those of your members I have been fortunate enough to meet at various times.

Yours truly,
FRANK PRENDERGAST,
Assistant to the President, Imperial Oil Ltd.

Minutes of Town Council Meeting

A regular meeting of the council was held on this date, with all members present. The minutes of the last regular meeting were adopted and the auditor's report from January to March inclusive, was accepted and ordered filed.

The assessor's report was received. A petition was received from the residents of Fourth Street, in Plan 6808CU, requesting that a water main be laid. The petitioners without the limits of the town must sanction inclusion within the town boundaries before action is taken.

A petition was received from the residents behind Second Street regarding the water drainage. The matter was left in the hands of the Works and Property committee, with power to act if the cost does not exceed $50.00 and if it exceeds that amount, the matter is to be referred back to the council.

Arrangements were made for sale of properties at a tax sale. Notice was given that a by-law be brought in to set the mill rate at 20 mills on the dollar.

Social Events of Local Interest

FAREWELL FOR MISS SURTEES

The members of Victoria Rebekah Lodge, at the close of their regular meeting on April 19th, held a social evening in honor of Miss M. E. Surtees, P.N.G., who is leaving shortly for her old home near Ottawa, Ont.

Cards were played, the prizes going to Mrs. S. Simister, of Blairmore, and Mrs. Higginbotham.

Following refreshments, Mrs. J. Yates and Mrs. W. White, on behalf of the members, presented Miss Surtees with a silver flower basket containing a spring bouquet, and extended the best wishes of the lodge. Miss Surtees, in a few words expressed her appreciation and wished the lodge every success.

A GOOD TURN—AND GOOD RESULTS

To Mrs. George A. Brown is due a tribute of praise for her work in raising funds for St. Alban's church. As soon as she heard of a heavy deficit to be met, she decided to make marmalade and sell it to her friends. Here is the result:

Proceeds from sale of marmalade	$20.00
Cost of material	6.00
Balance	$14.00
Balance of funds from G. Guild	2.00

Amt. towards stipend fund—$16.00

Appended to the statement turned over with the money, Mrs. Brown states she will continue to fill orders. The Journal is pleased to pass the word along for this good work.

Winning three games in the finals for the Allan Cup, 30-year-old trophy emblematic of senior hockey championship for the Dominion, Trail Smoke-Eaters last night in the Victoria Arena, Calgary, won the fourth game of the series against Cornwall Fliers, with a score of 3-1. The first game was at Saskatoon, with a score of 6-4 for Trail; the second game at Calgary was 8-2 for Trail; the third game 2-1 for Cornwall. The series was on a best three out of five games. Trail's total was 18 goals, and Cornwall's 9 goals.

The cup was presented last night on conclusion of the game, Dave Duchak, captain of Trail team, receiving the coveted trophy.

Hockey Prizes on View in Pattinson's and Coleman Hardware

The major prizes being raffled by the Canadians' hockey club are on display in the local hardware stores; the refrigerator in Pattinson's and the Chesterfield in the Coleman Hardware. Tickets can be secured on these prizes at either store.

The hockey executive is desirous of securing young ladies or a ladies' sports organization to sell tickets. Would the West Coleman Co-Eds softball team or any other ladies' softball club consider selling these tickets? These organizations are in need of funds and by having every member sell tickets a club could profit to the extent of $50 or more. They could divide the town in sections and make a thorough canvass. Judging from general opinion the public are in support of the executive's endeavors to organize a good hockey team for next winter and as a result the tickets should be fairly easy to sell. What about it girls? All information regarding this campaign can be had at The Journal office.

ORDAINED AS MINISTER OF NAZARENE CHURCH

Miss C. Helen Moonshian of the Nazarene Mission Church was recently ordained at the annual assembly held at Red Deer, receiving her orders from Dr. J. W. Goodman, presiding general superintendent.

Miss Moonshian is a graduate of E. N.C. Wollaston, Mass., majoring in theology, and she successfully completed the prescribed minister's course of study. Ordination marks a most important epoch in Miss Moonshian's ministerial calling. She has been particularly active in evangelistic and mission work. With her ability as a leader, her wide experience in travel and college work, and her pleasing personality, she has made many friends in the Crows' Nest Pass, who extend to her best wishes at this time, as she begins another sphere of usefulness and service.

EASTER HOLIDAYS NOT FAVORABLE BY WEATHER

Cold wind and rain marred the holidays, but it did not interfere with church attendance, as all churches report many being present. Early services at Holy Ghost and St. Alban's churches were attended by a large number of communicants, while the services at the United Church, Salvation Army and Nazarene mission received a large quota.

On Good Friday at Bellevue United church the choir of 27 male and female voices under Mrs. Richard Upton gave in splendid style the cantata "From Olivet to Calvary," several from Coleman attending the recital.

Curling Club Elects Officers for Next Season

Presentation of Trophies at Smoker on Saturday Night—Vote of Thanks to McGillivray Company.

Officers elected at the annual meeting on Saturday night in the I.O.O.F. hall were president, J. H. Boulton; vice-president, Ed. Leduc; secretary-treasurer, A. Balloch; executive, W. Chapman, S. Moores, W. Hoggan, R. Burt, A. Fraser and J. Anderson.

J. Emmerson, president for 1937, was chairman, and called on Colonel R. F. Barnes to present the trophies. The McGillivray Cup was won by the Boulton rink and the prizes accompanying it, also donated by the McGillivray Creek Coal and Coke Co. Ltd., were silver tobacco humidor, made to represent curling stones, making a very appropriate and highly-prized souvenir. A vote of thanks was proposed, and heartily applauded, to the McGillivray Co.

The Merchants' Cup was won by the Moores rink, the personnel of the rink being presented with Waterman pens. J. Howarth accepted the trophy in the absence of Sam Moores, skip.

Taking part in the program were C. F. Found, with stories and songs; Howard Davies and Archie McCulloch, songs; Tom Lawlor, recitation.

Unemployed Hold Protest Parade at Blairmore

Mayor Williams States That Representations to Government Have Failed on Unsympathetic Ears.

Demanding that the provincial government pursue aggressive steps to increase the sale of western coal in Ontario markets, and urging a tax strike among ratepayers until a provincial fuel policy is adopted, were among resolutions passed on Monday at a mass meeting, of which J. Price, of Bellevue, was chairman.

Speakers were Rev. Richard Upton, who has been active for over a year in an effort to arouse interest in wider markets; S. G. Bannan, Tony Pondelick and J. Serra.

"Canadian Coal for Canadians," "We Want Work," "Unemployment Relief a Federal Responsibility," "We Demand Unemployment Insurance," "Increased Canadian Coal Orders Means Increased Canadian Buying Power" were some of the inscriptions on banners carried in the parade.

Enoch Williams, mayor of Blairmore, stated that petitions to the government had not obtained the desired results, and pleadings of delegates had fallen on unsympathetic ears.

Other methods would have to be used to have governments realize the desperate plight of workers on short time and that of the unemployed.

Employment Commission Report

Whatever parliament may do with the final report of the Purvis National Commission on Employment and whatever discussion may take place in the House of Commons with respect to the recommendations of the Commission it is reasonable to assume that by the time the contents of the report have become well digested by the public, it will provoke a great deal of debate throughout the country and some aspects of it are destined to prove controversial.

Some phases of the report will undoubtedly receive quite general support throughout the country, both in Eastern and Western Canada, and probably in this category can be placed the fundamental premise that the long range solution of the problem of unemployment is some form of national unemployment insurance which, as is pointed out, is already projected by the Federal government, supported by a supplementary system of unemployment relief.

Opinions Differ

So far as this general principle is concerned the commission was unanimous in its approval but on the question of assumption of responsibility for employment aid there was a divergence of opinion, one member of the Commission, Mrs. Mary Sutherland of Vancouver, dissenting from the joint opinion of the other members that this responsibility should be assumed in its entirety by the Federal government. Mrs. Sutherland expressed it as her opinion; "That it is fundamental that the primary responsibility for the relief of distress (in our reference distress resulting from unemployment or loss of occupation) should rest on the unit of government nearest the applicant, the Municipality and—on the Province, the Dominion contributing thereto when, in its view, a practical necessity exists because of the unusual nature or extent of the distress."

The fact alone that one of the members of the Commission should have chosen to sign the report with a reservation on which she apports terms a fundamental principle, is bound to bring this question of policy into the limelight and ensures for it a considerable amount of controversy before the question is settled to the satisfaction of the general public, if ever.

Room For Improvement

Whatever may be the outcome of this divergence of opinion on this outstandingly important aspect of the question, however, there will be general agreement with the Commission's opinion that any system of unemployment insurance and unemployment relief aid should be closely co-ordinated with a system of employment offices and services.

Under the present set up it has been felt, and not without some foundation, that there is not sufficient co-ordination between the administration of relief and the governmental business of bringing together work and people who are unemployed. Anything that can be done to ensure the very closest co-operation between these two functions will be an important step in the right direction.

Another aspect of the report which is likely to provoke considerable controversy, and particularly in the west, is the Commission's lukewarm attitude towards proposals to initiate programs of public works as a temporary alleviation of unemployment, though there will be agreement with the commission's recommendations as to types of work which should be undertaken if the government decides that works should be instituted and put into effect.

Demand For Works

The demand for the institution of public works programs in lieu of direct relief has grown very rapidly in the west in the last few months or in the past year and this demand is by no means confined to the urban centres. Only recently the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities went on record in support of a relief works program to be put into effect not later than June 15 and there is a growing opinion in the rural districts of the other western provinces that public work, even if it is more costly, is preferable to a dole system.

This viewpoint is taken on the ground that if constructive work can be provided and particularly if it comes with the assurance of some revenue to the country the taxpayers, at least, will get some return for the millions which are and have been expended for relief and that the sapping of morale which enforced idleness entails will be eliminated.

There is no gainsaying the Commission's statement that "hastily conceived or impromptu programs of public works are dangerous and likely to be abortive" for the several reasons which are outlined in the report, but there are projects which can be undertaken which will provide a substantial amount of work for unskilled labor, which are needed for the development of the country and which can be counted upon to at least partially repay their costs, if not immediately, at any rate eventually, and without interfering with or retarding private industry or the absorption of skilled labor into private industry.

Want To Be Shown

It can be taken for granted that the people of Western Canada will want to be shown very cogent reasons before they are willing to abandon a strong desire to see public work replace direct relief, at least to the extent that it can be done reasonable and on an economic basis.

Position Is Reversed

In 1830 Tipping System Was, Un-known In United States

In 1830, an English traveler named John Fowler stopped at a little upstate New York tavern. He had supper, lodging and breakfast, and the charge amounted to 81 cents—with no tips. The traveler was more impressed by the absence of the tips than by the reasonableness of the charge. Commenting on the incident in the April Forum, Alvin P. Harlow says: "Alack, the position is now reversed, and America is the land of bigger and better tipping." In 1930, to reprint one item, New York City paid its taxi drivers $26,000,000 in tips. Tips for barbers, shoeshiners, corset-fitters, tips exchanged for junior service to that tip-and-absurdity, the hat-check tip, amounting in a few weeks to more than the price of the hat! Undemocratic, un-American tips, contributing to the something-for-nothing urge and the pauper psychology, this "racket in disguise" has its economic as well as its moral weakness. For, asks Mr. Harlow, "Who is to blame for the small salaries? Primarily, you are. You have developed the tipping system to a point where employers rely on it. If the practice should, by a miracle, cease tomorrow, employees, unions, and labor boards would quickly force employers to raise wages. . . and employees and patrons would be able to meet and part on a basis of self-respect."

AT HOME 20 WEEKS WITH RHEUMATISM

Wife Feared Husband Would Never Work Again

When her husband had been at home 20 weeks with rheumatism in his back this woman began to think he would never work again. At last, she said to him: "Let's try Kruschen," and the change that took place was in her own words, "a miracle." Here is her letter: "My husband is subject to rheumatism and suffered terribly with his back. Some time ago, I had him in the house 20 weeks with it. I really don't think he would ever work again. We tried all the different kinds of salts you could mention, but none of them did him any good. Then I said, 'Let's try Kruschen.' Since then, we have proved Kruschen Salts to be a miracle in his life. My husband is back at his job, thanks to Kruschen. The change is made in like a minute." (Mrs. B.)

Emergency Grain Reserve

Shipping Magnate Urges Britain To Act At Once

Creation of an emergency grain reserve to tide over the British Isles for not less than six months is urged by Philip Halpin, chairman of the Hot Line.

With prevailing low freight rates and reasonable wheat prices, he suggested the British government should be well advised to seize the opportunity and act at once.

Mr. Halpin believes there are too many ships in the world to operate economically in face of the grain available. Notwithstanding, there was growing agitation for increased tonnage to safeguard Britain from the possibility of starvation in time of war.

If tonnage was brought to the level existing in 1914 the industry would be forced into state control which, he said, would signalize the end of the individualistic supremacy of British shipping.

Experiments conducted for the past two years have shown barley superior to corn as a hog feed. Prof. W. Crampton of Macdonald College, Quebec, said at the annual National Barley Committee meeting at Winnipeg.

Oats is inferior to both barley and corn, he added, while mixtures of oats and barley or oats and corn give results intermediate between single grains.

A Nuisance

When The Radio Man Says There Will Be A Pause For Station Announcements

A radio program may be going at high speed when the announcer breaks in with news that there will be a "pause for station announcements." Why? This has interested us for some time. Apparently there is a rule of some kind or another that every so often the listener must be informed as to the station he is tuned to.

In the old days it is possible that this was desirable. When radio was a new toy and when listeners often spent half the night trying to see how many stations they could pick up there was curiosity as to the stations they could hear. But that is not pretty well gone. In these days of chain programs and well-established wave bands everyone must know the station he is hearing. Can there be any doubt about it?

We confess that every time we hear a pause for station announcements we feel like saying scold to the radio. Regina Leader-Post.

Lord Balfour's Prophecy

In 1916 His Foretold Creation Of Great German-Speaking State

A writer in the London Daily Telegraph calls attention to a remarkable memorandum written by Lord Balfour for the British Cabinet in November, 1916, while the great guns still roared on the Western Front. "The result of the war," he wrote, "may be the complete breakup of the Dual Monarchy, and if the Dual Monarchy breaks up . . . such a change would create a great German-speaking state more formidable than Germany before the war. I do not disguise from myself that the dangers of such a Teutonic reorganization are considerable . . . if the result of the war is to convince the German-speaking peoples that their only hope of national greatness lies in their consenting to forget all differences and welding themselves into a single powerful state."

How much might have been different had the Allies remembered that at Versailles.

Virtue Of Chewing Gum

Habit Appears To Have Much To Commend It

Whenever we see a face masticating gum we think of the rebuke a colored wife gave her husband after he confessed he had spent his pay on a merry-go-round. "You bin ridin' all day," she said, "but you never got no-where." The gum chewer chews for hours, but never eats anything. That, however, is no condemnation of the chewing gum habit. In fact, it has much to commend it. Chewing that plant substance could never have attained the vast popularity it has unless it had merits.

Therefore we are glad to find so eminent a person as Dean Mannix of Marquette University putting in a good word for chewing gum. The Marquette co-eds recently debated the subject and made out a case by coming to the conclusion that it afforded relief from nerve tensions while studying, or to suppress excitement while watching athletic contests. Dean Mannix says it is futile to resist the fact that millions chew; the young people should be taught how to chew properly.

Chewing is common at the universities, and there seems room for an experienced coach who should be able to say whether gum should be manipulated with the gratifying motion of the jaws, or from side to side like a buck saw. Anyway, the mere act of chewing is calming and soothing. It generates a quiescent spirit. One observes this among the ruminants of the farm. There is no more attractive expression of complete contentment with the world than that on the face of a cow as it chews its cud, or on the face of a sheep constantly employed which is the animal equivalent to ruminating on a wad of gum.

Therefore, we are all for expert instruction on the best way to get results out of gum. But with it should go instructions on the most satisfactory method of disposal of temporary parking of a wad from which the full flavor has not been extracted. And when that problem is solved we hope the professors will turn their attention to a safe method of disposing of razor blades. The Stratford "Eacon-Herald."

To Climb Mount Everest

Seven Young Men Will Attempt To Conquer High Peak

An expedition consisting of seven young men, who will carry no oxygen apparatus or wireless equipment and only a minimum of provisions and tackle, will set out shortly to attempt to conquer 29,000-foot high Mount Everest.

The young climbers believe that large and heavily equipped expeditions have been responsible for many failures and disasters in the past and they intend to make their first assault on Everest unhampered by unnecessary impediments.

Every member of the party is physically capable of reaching the summit, and they are anxious to find out whether it is possible for a man to live at 29,000 feet with out breathing by artificial aid.

Will Stay In England

Austrian Ex-Minister To Britain Will Pursue Interest In Sports

In the British court circular appeared the announcement: "Baron Frankenstein has left 15 Belgrave Square. His postal address will be St. James Club, Piccadilly." The brief item signified the end of the diplomatic career of the man who had been Austrian Minister to Great Britain since 1920. Baron Frankenstein, whose career began in the days of the Hapsburg empire, was at the peace conference that ratified the disappearance of the Hapsburgs and the disruption of their State.

The baron, now 60, resigned his post after the recent Anschluss, and rather than return to Vienna, decided to stay in England, there to pursue his interest in golf, hunting and tennis. His hobby is the collection of Oriental art. Viscountess Elnank has offered the diplomat a "picturesque cottage" in Hampshire—New York Times.

Might Change Their Luck

Egypt Decides To Remove Ancient Kings From Exhibition

Egypt is planning to rebury its Pharaohs, sealing them down under the earth never again to be seen by the eye of man. Once they were exhibited in a museum at Cairo, but later were removed by the Government to the mausoleum built as a tomb for Zagnoli Pasha, national hero, who died nine years ago. Last year the Government moved Zagnoli from a temporary tomb and reburied him in the mausoleum, moving the Pharaohs back to the Cairo museum. Now it is proposed to build a special mausoleum for them either at Giza, near the pyramids, or at Helwan. Throughout the land thousands believe that writhing Pharaohs from their tombs has brought bad luck.

Reported Sweden Has Developed Spring Wheat That Will Reduce Imports

Washington agriculture department foreign trade experts reported Sweden has developed a new type of spring wheat, expected soon to reduce that country's imports of North American grain.

Sweden's recent imports of wheat, averaging about 1,500,000 bushels a year, have been largely from the United States and Canada. They consisted almost entirely of superior grades used in making high quality flour.

The new wheat, known as Diamant II, was developed in experiments that started in 1923, the department said.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

WALTER WINCHELL gets away with his keyhole reporting in a big city, and is well paid for it. The same stuff in a small town would bring him to net fights very quickly. We nicknamed an ardent fisherman "the grass-hopper king" and he came round and gave us his opinion, which wasn't complimentary. Other little references of a humorous nature have caused a near fight at times, simply because we are so convenient to be got at that almost before the ink on the paper is dry someone comes around with revenge gleaming in his eye and threatens to clean up the whole gang in the print shop. We usually keep the type mallet within range so that if the caller becomes too threatening we can take up arms in defence of the liberty of the press.

WE HAVE heard daily newspaper men, worn out with the monotony of having to dig up something every day for their pages, express the hope that some day they could get hold of a weekly and enjoy a little pleasure with their work. There have been some very good daily men take over weeklies, and one can easily spot them by the make-up and quality of the news. But country journalism is a far different thing to daily newspaper work. The city work is more or less impersonal. You can publish the cold stark facts without any sympathetic regard for personal feelings. In the smaller places, which the city man regards as "out in the sticks," the editor meets almost every day those of whom he writes. He cannot be as "hard-boiled" as the city man. He welcomes the new born infant with a few lines; later he carries a report of its wedding and if he lives long enough he will write an obituary telling what a fine individual he or she was. The city man may smile at it sometimes, yet were a country editor to treat his subjects with the same impersonal style that the city newspaper publisher does, his paper would lose that local interest which is its main appeal to the community which it serves.

WE ARE all susceptible to a little bit of flattery, even if it is only seeing our name in the paper. It gives a feeling of pride that we are noticed, and newspapermen are quite as susceptible as those outside of their ken. It bears out the well known fact that no matter what our station in life may be, we are more vitally interested in the comings and goings of those nearest to us, our townspeople, neighbors and friends, than in the greater and more important happenings of life. That is why a local newspaper is so interesting to its immediate circle or readers, and to those who, having lived here, move to other parts. To those not knowing the people, it has the same appeal.

ANOTHER important thing in connection with weekly newspapers is this: to young children the local newspaper is the first paper they form the habit of reading. Later they read the dailies to get informed on world events, but the weekly of the town in which they were born and attended school holds their interest in many cases throughout life. Some of the most prominent men in public and business life in Canada will frankly admit that they still take the home paper no matter where circumstances may take them to live. For these reasons weeklies should strive to print all that is worth while in their communities. If there is something of the darker side of life which shouldn't be suppressed, the country editor usually has the good judgment to let the culprits down as lightly as possible, and not drag their names through the mud. The weeklies perform a service which a daily does not begin to, or even attempt, and of the more than 600 weeklies published in Canada, a very large percentage is taken note of for editorial expression and opinions of what the country is talking and thinking of. Moreover, the people enjoy the privileges of a press which is not censored, licensed or coerced into printing only that which political despots might desire, thereby getting the truth as far as is humanly possible.

WE PUT FORTH the suggestion that high school students should take over one issue, gather the news, write the stories, editorials and gather up all the interesting local items. It would prove interesting, and maybe they could show us what appeals most to local people in the way of news. Some interesting papers have been published in various places by school students. So here's an opportunity for aspiring journalists who believe they can show us how to run a newspaper, for we're never too old to learn.

IF TAXPAYERS were to strike, and refuse to pay taxes, the unemployed in the cities and other places would be absolutely out of luck in receiving relief. Things have come to a deplorable condition when those living on relief dictate on what terms they will work. Too much is demanded. If people become wards of the state, looking to the government to keep them, then they must of necessity obey the conditions under which work is provided. We all have to follow this method if we wish to hold a job.

Anglican Choir Sing Cantata

At St. Luke's church in Blairmore on Sunday evening the choir of St. Alban's church sang "The Easter Gift," an Easter service of song and story. The story was read by Rev. A. S. Partington, and solos by Frances Partington, Reggie McMullen, Donald Graham, Mrs. Wm. Jackson and Mrs. Blower, the latter two singing a duet. The choir will present this again on Sunday evening in St. Alban's church, and members of the congregation are urged to attend the service. This will likely be the last service here of Mr. Partington, who will leave shortly for Creston.

Following the service a meeting of the vestry will be held.

A Success Story

Fifteen years ago Harry Meade established the Bellevue Bakery. The limitations of a small town business did not deter him from branching out beyond its confines, and by establishing dealers in other towns, he developed a volume of business large enough to require four motor delivery vans to serve the Pass towns from Pincher Creek to Michel. This week he took delivery of four 1938 Ford vans, replacing those formerly in use.

For some years Coleman was without a bakery, and it was in that time that J. W. Shields became the local dealer, serving Coleman people from his store in West Coleman, which he has continued since.

The new vans are light cream in color and present a smart appearance.

Mr. Lloyd Thompson of Calgary was a holiday visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dibble. Their daughter, Helen, returned from Calgary Normal school and next week will take as part of her course a week's teaching at Pincher station school.

When Cotton Goods Had to be Imported

A FEW HUNDRED YEARS AGO in England, only the rich could afford to wear clothes made of cotton. They were an expensive luxury because there was no spinning and weaving industry in England. Cotton goods had to be imported.

BUT WHEN the English people themselves began to spin and weave, the price of cotton goods came down. After a time, even people of ordinary means could afford to buy cotton shirts and dresses.

IN CANADA we have had the advantage of possessing our own cotton textile industry for nearly one hundred years. There are now 42 mills in 27 towns of the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario. More than 21,000 men and women find steady, year-round employment in producing cotton yarn and cloth. Last year they spent over $13,000,000.00 in wages—much of it going to buy the products of Western Canadian farms.

The map will be on plates of burnished copper from Canadian mines, and by operating switches visitors will be able to light up the scenes of various features of Canadian life, such as mines, outposts of the Mounties, aerodromes, cities, and so on. There will be pictures of the chief buildings of the bigger cities. The map is said to be the biggest illuminated map in the Empire.

FLIN FLON

"The Story of Its Finding and Position To-day"

By PRATT KUHN

THE VALUE OF FLIN FLON TO MANITOBA AND SASKATCHEWAN

Remember we found that merely to put the mine into production took thirty millions of dollars, much of which was put into circulation in the two provinces in the shape of wages and purchases of supplies.

To-day the mine employs 1,720 people, and remarkable as it is true, over 640 of these are from Manitoba and Saskatchewan, with 280 more from other parts of Canada, and 243 from the British Empire (other than Canada). This makes over 75.5 of all employees recorded as British subjects. Of the total staff nearly 1,000 are married, and that accounts for the splendid town, nearly 7,000, that has grown up, equipped with schools, community halls, and every known organization such as Elks, Kiwanis, Rotary, Reglar Fellers, Muscans, etc., etc.

Mining development on a sound scale thus means attraction of capital and steady payrolls. It's a backbone to the agricultural sections of the province and provides a market, so amazingly important, for the farm produce.

I just ran across a note clipped from a business paper in 1928, which shows another angle to what Flin Flon meant to Manitoba at that time. It reads as follows:

"What mining means to the country at large was vividly portrayed in 1927 by the simple announcement that Canada Cement Company would make a million dollar addition to their Winnipeg plant to handle orders from the Flin Flon Mine and Power Plant."

Remember, too, that the distance from Flin Flon, Manitoba, to Rouyn, Que., is greater than half way between the Atlantic and Pacific ocean and that this field contains almost every mineral known to man. What wonderful possibilities there are! And ever since 1930 the Flin Flon has been turning out millions of dollars in copper, zinc, gold and silver and paying out millions in wages, for supplies and taxes to both provinces, and the Dominion.

Detroit Church Took Vote On Services And Sermons

The New Outlook says a Congregational church in Detroit has been trying the experiment of an occasional "sermonless service" of worship. The pastor asked for a plebiscite on the subject, the vote to be for "sermonless regularly, sermonless services of worship, or occasional services without sermons." Fifty-four per cent. of the congregation voted for sermonless regularly, the occasional sermonless service, and three per cent. would cast out the sermon from all services.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

APRIL 24

RECEIVING VISION FOR SERVICE

Golden text: This is my beloved Son; hear ye him. Mark 9:7.

Lesson: Mark 9:2-10.

Devotional reading: Hebrews 1:1-6.

Explanations And Comments

The Transfiguration, Mark 9:2-8. About six days after Peter's avowal at Caesarea Philippi that Jesus is the Christ, and Jesus' announcement of his coming crucifixion, Jesus took his three favored disciples, Peter, James and John, and ascended a high mountain where they could be "apart by themselves." Dr. A. B. Bruce remarks: "The Gospels historians made no attempt to be so careful in their indication of time, and this minute accuracy here signifies in effect: 'While the foregoing communications and discourses concerning the cross and Jesus' death were in the thought of all, the wondrous events we are now about to relate took place.'" The date is, in fact, "a fingerprint pointing back to the conversation on the passion and saying, 'If you desire to understand what follows, remember what went before.'"

There on the mount Jesus was transfigured before them. The fashion of his countenance was altered (Luke 9:29); his face did shine as the sun (Matthew 17:2); Jesus had been praying. Luke tells us John G. Paton in his autobiography speaks of the wonder and awe with which he and his brother would notice the beautiful light on their father's face as he appeared after a time of seclusion when, after he had been talking with God; and you recall that the face of Moses shone after he had been in communion with God on Mount Sinai. We can readily understand that Jesus can be excited in spirit, a new light would shine from his face, and his whole aspect would be changed after hours spent in prayer. Was it glory, shining upon him from within, or was it the glory shining through that the disciples saw—who shall say? His very garments glowed with a whiter whiteness than any fuller's (Luke 9:35) whiteness, thickens, by moltenness, beating and pressing cloth.

While they were speaking there came a cloud that overshadowed them, and from the cloud there was heard a voice saying, "This is my beloved Son; hear ye him."

Gardening

A brown or green-stained window box overflowing with gaily blooming flowers is easily produced. This sort of gardening is highly intensive and a very high soil must be used, and in addition a fairly frequent application of chemical fertilizer during the season. The soil must be of a fair depth, at least seven inches of soil being available. Being exposed on all sides to the wind, a thorough soaking once a day is advised.

There must be holes in the bottom of the box to drain, and also a layer of gravel, cinders, broken crockery or similar material for the same purpose. Along the front, trailing Nasturtiums, German Ivy, Lobelia, Alyssum and similar plants are best. Along the sides Begonias, Ferns, Geraniums and any other plants especially recommended for this purpose farther back. Shelter from the sun for a day or two should be provided until the plants get established. The same treatment and planting methods will be used with hanging pots.

Tender vegetables are those which have been grown quickly. Especially with such things as radish, carrots and beets, is slow growth disastrous as the roots become woody and filled with objectionable fibres. But this rule also applies to those things used for salads. On this account experts advise pushing growth with frequent cultivation, which in addition to the above also conserves moisture. Cultivation alone will often keep the vegetables going through a dry spell but, however, a few gallons of water or an hour or two with the hose at this time will tend further to help. Where the supply of water is not as convenient as it might be, is a good plan, in laying out the garden, to plant those things most in need of extra moisture, such as radish, lettuce and celery, closest to the pump. Fertilizer is another way of hurrying growth and therefore assuring vegetables of the highest quality.

When an abundance of flowers for bouquets are wanted, experienced gardeners often grow these in a special place. Usually a portion of the vegetable patch or a row at the back may be reserved for this purpose. Some well designed beds of mixed annuals are spoiled if too many flowers are picked and then again there are certain things like sweet peas, for instance, that have little attractive foliage but beautiful blossoms.

Queen Mary Visits Museum

Asked To See Regalia Worn By Prince Of Wales

For a moment Queen Mary stood before the regalia which her eldest son, the Duke of Windsor, wore when he became the Prince of Wales.

Visiting the Welsh national museum, the Queen Mother asked especially to see a purple velvet and ermine robe with gold chaplet, sword, verge and ring in which Edward was invested in 1911 at Carnarvon.

She looked in silence, then turned away.

A hamlet isn't a hamlet legally until it has a cook, a churn, a bull, a cat, a herdsman, a kiln and a plow, according to an old Welsh law.

Presented At Court

U.S. Ambassador Dashes The Hopes Of American Girls In London

Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to the court of St. James, dashed the hopes of hundreds of United States debutantes by announcing that the number of American girls presented to the King and Queen would be drastically reduced.

He said he considered "undemocratic" the practice of U.S. ambassadors in selecting every year "a small number of young ladies from a long list, very few, if any, of whom he has ever seen."

Accordingly, he said, he had decided to confine presentations to the families of U.S. officials in Great Britain and to members of American families who are domiciled in London.

Mr. Kennedy reported the Court was ready as always to receive as many American women as in the past. He said the embassy for many years had presented between 20 and 30 annually. The average, he added, was "twice as great as the number of ladies presented by all the other diplomatic missions together."

Reveals From Air

Have Been Helpful In Rehabilitation Work In Drought Areas

Air surveys are proving remarkably useful in rehabilitation work in the drought area, says Dr. E. S. Archibald, superintendent of experimental farms. These surveys are used both in development and in the economic survey.

Last year two planes were used and 12,500 pictures were taken from the air. The extraordinary feature of this work is that pictures looking vertically downward can, by means of the use of the stereoscopic, show with almost absolute accuracy every gully and change of contour. The pictures can be re-charted to show elevations of one or two feet. By means of an oblique picture the percentage of crop and summerfall can be accurately shown.

This year 20,000 pictures will be taken from the air for water and economic surveys.

Book Disrupts Family

Several Members Claim They Own Valuable First Edition Copy

Sealed in a safe at Surbiton, England, is a first edition copy of "Alice in Wonderland," that has disrupted a family. Its value is placed as high as $5,000 by experts. Miss Spencer of Finsbury, thinking it merely an old and only slightly valuable story of the immortal classic, gave it to the library at Surbiton. When an expert ran across it he rushed to the librarian with the news. It was withdrawn from its shelf and Miss Spencer was informed. Two other branches of the family, one represented by Miss Spencer's seventy-year-old aunt, disputed her claim to the book. Lawyers are trying to unravel the claims with a fair prospect of settlement out of court.

Ancient Trumpet Call

Will Be Heard From Polish Building At New York Fair

The historic Polish trumpet call known as the hejnał will be repeated each day at noon from a medieval tower which will surmount Poland's building at the New York World's Fair next year. The call always rings on an unfinished note and dated from the year 1241 when the Tartars invaded Poland. A trumpet sounded the opening notes of a call to arms, but was cut short when an arrow pierced his throat.

The house of lords may transact certain business when there are only three members present, not necessarily including the lord chancellor.

"Rather easily," she answered, she took a lighter tone. "We Britons are a funny folk, as perhaps you've noticed," she said. "And full of paradoxes. We hate snakes and we produce more and bigger snakes than any other country on the face of the earth. We jeer at bounders trying to act like gentlemen and tolerate gentlemen who act like bounders. We resent pushers like Pender and we look down on pretenders—"

"Like me," said Ernest.
 "Oh, shut up and let me finish," Rosa said. "There are pretenders and pretenses. Some of them stand by their guns when their bluff is called, and show the one quality which we English value above all others—pluck. Stop chewing 'that leaf' Ernest. I'm talking about you."

He threw away the leaf.
 "I won't mind going back to the castle now," he said. "I don't care a fig for the others. I'll go with you if you think I'm sort of all right. If you think well of me, Rosa, everybody else in the whole world can—well, they can go and sit on a porcupine—that's what they can do."

"Thank well of you, my dear Ernest," she said. "But of course I do. You saved our castle for me and at the moment ago you probably saved my life."

"It was nothing," said Ernest.
 "Oh, no? I'd look funny going around without my life. And that reminds me that I haven't properly thanked you—"

"Don't mention it," said Ernest.
 "Yes, I will," said Rosa, and she kissed him.

Ernest Bingley came as close to tumbling out of the tree as a man can come. It was just a single, quick, light kiss, but it nearly bowled Ernest off his branch. He had to throw his arms around Rosa to keep from falling.

He let go a second later when he heard a voice say.

"Oh, there you are."

It was the Earl of Bingley, meaning to come through the grove.

"Oh, hullo, Father," said Lady Rosa.

"What are you doing up there?" asked the earl, "playing Christmas tree ornaments?"

"We—were just found ourselves here," stammered Ernest.

"Staying long?" inquired the earl. "No, we're coming right down."

"I'll wait," said the earl.

Ernest helped Rosa to dismount from the tree.

"We'd best hold along," said the earl, "and no stopping to pick buttermilk, either, or we shall be late for lunch. I'm so peckish I could eat a jellied curate. Being thrown from a horse always gives me a wobbly appetite."

Homeward the three horseless hunters wended their way.

When they reached the castle, Ernest slipped away from the earl and his daughter, and ascended his self in his tower. His pretext for leaving them was that he wanted to see how Charles was getting along. Charles being the name he had given to the fox cub. The nursery of the infant Charles had been transferred from the clothes closet in Ernest's room to a small store-room just off the butler's pantry, and Mrs. Featherby had been installed as foster-mother, head nurse and chief dietician, posts for which she volunteered, declaring,

"He needs a mother's care, Mr. Bingley, and seeing as how you've never been a mother, sir, I'll take care of the dear little ruff, and bring him up like he was one of my own, I having presented the late Mr. F. with six, though not foxes."

She demonstrated her claim to a maternal instinct by bending over Charles's crib—a shoe-box—and gurgling.

"Nice little foxie izzum hungry? Nurse Featherby will feedum booful milk. He was good little foxie, diddum was?"

She kept an eye on Crump to observe the effect this display of femininity had on the butler, who hovered in the background as pleased and interested as Doctor Daffoe.

Having ascertained that Charles, under the care of the cook, was getting on famously, Ernest went himself in his aerie, and crawled into bed, pink coat, boots, breeches and all, not for warmth, but because he could not get them off. In his stiff state he was as inept at stooping as the Statue of Liberty.

The jolting Fin McCool had given him left him with aching joints and a throbbing head, but his heart felt fine.

He dozed, intermittently, through the rest of the day, and, between naps, debated with himself whether he should attend the ball. Pro advanced the argument that, as his month's debauch, with its days of dancing and talking with Rosa were numbered. Con pointed out that (a) Rosa would have much time for him, and that (b) the other guests, after that day's debacle, would have no time for him at all. It seemed to Ernest as certain as the setting of the sun that if a popularity contest were held in the castle that night, Ernest Bingley would finish a bad loser.

He pondered what he should do, and he made a wager that he was in for an unpalatable evening of cold shoulders and sour looks. As dusk cast its violet veil over the castle, Ernest decided to chew the ball.

To Sloot, who tapped at the door to tell him it was time to dress for dinner, Ernest said,

"Please give the earl my compliments, and tell him that I'm indisposed and shall remain in my room tonight."

"Are you very ill, sir?" inquired Sloot.

"Oh, no, just a slight case of caterpillar stomach," answered Ernest. "It will pass."

"Is there anything I can do for you, sir?"

"Thank you, no, Sloot. Just leave me in peace."

"Very good, sir."

"But, wait, Sloot. Is there any cold grouse left from last night?"

"Yes, sir, there is."

"Fine. Just bring me up a tub of grouse-breast, a tumbler of buttermilk and a copy of Ivanhoe."

"Yes, sir," said Sloot. "But if your stomach is upset, wouldn't you rather have Coddle make you some nice gruel?"

"Sloot," said Ernest, sternly, "there is no such thing as nice gruel. Thanks for the thought, but no gruel. It gives me inverted nostrils."

Even Ivanhoe, Ernest's oldest and staunchest friend, failed to hold his interest; for up from the Great Hall floated the strains of a Lohar waltz and it was all too easy for Ernest to see with that inward eye which is alleged to be the bliss of solitude but frequently is not, Lady Rosa in the arms of Captain Duff-Hooper, though only on the dance-floor, he hoped.

"Beauty and the Beast-people," muttered Ernest, and a handsome old edition of Ivanhoe was surprised to have itself dashed to the floor.

Ernest directed himself out of bed and stuffed himself with his form-fitting evening clothes with as much celerity as a man can whose hinges need oiling and who is shy of cuticle in a number of important places.

"They can snub me all they like," he said, as he forced his flayed anatomy into the suit. "One dance with her will be worth it. One dance. What am I talking about? One look! One smile—and they can snub me bow-legged."

As he left his room and started for the Great Hall he found that he already was bow-legged, not permanently perhaps, but at least until he regained his lost epidermis.

On his slow and smarting way to the arena he formed a plan. It was to enter the Great Hall as usual, to slay as a slow lark, and lurk behind a suit of armor until he saw a chance to claim a dance with Rosa.

Luck and castle etiquette were against him. As he stepped into the Great Hall the dance music stopped with a rattle of drums, and in the comparative quiet which ensued, Crump announced his coming in a voice that rang through the big room.

"Mr. Ernest Bingley," clarified Crump.

Four hundred and twenty-two eyes focused on Ernest. No star of stage or screen could not get asked for a better entrance. To fee or not to fee was the question with Ernest Bingley.

As he stood facing the assemblage as if it were a firing squad a surprising sound began to beat on his ear-drums. It was made by the guests bringing their palms together. Ernest looked behind him to see whose entrance has elicited such enthusiastic applause. Nobody was behind him but Crump. He wondered what that capable personage had done to earn the ovation.

"All together now—For he's a jolly good fellow, which nobody can deny."

Two hundred and ten voices took up the chorus. The only voice missing was Duff-Hooper's. That rousing old anthem of approval filled the Great Hall.

"For Ernest's a jolly good fellow, And so say all of us."

Ernest was frozen there, no more dazed than if he'd dropped a grand piano on his head. Then the Duke of Beedington waded to him on a brandied breeze and shook his hand.

"Stout fella," said the duke. "Couldn't ride, but did. Jumped Lester's wall twice and saved the life of what's-her-name. My idea of a real sportsman. Lush with me at the club one day, what?"

Others crowded around Ernest and expressed similar sentiments. Only Duff-Hooper held aloof. Perhaps the fact that his mouth had shied at a duck and pitched him into a pond from whence he emerged with mud in his ears and polyglots in his pockets had sowed in him the seeds of hubbub.

"Speech! Speech!" piped the Earl of Bingley.

Urged by words and applause, Ernest cleared an extra seat throat and said,

"I guess I'm lucky. I guess you could call me the luckiest guy in the world. I guess you can say I may have noticed that I didn't ride to-day as if I'd been born in a saddle (Laughter); or as if I'd ever even seen a saddle (Laughter); but I guess you'll all have to admit that I was born with a gold horse-shoe in my mouth. (Prolonged laughter and cries of Hear, hear!) I guess that's all I can say now except that you've been mighty kind to me and that this is the happiest night of my life." (Sustained applause and cries of "Well done, Bingley. Stout fella! Bravo!" etc.)

The band swung into "Tales from a Viennese Woods."

"Shall we Strauss?" Lady Rosa said.

"Oh, I'd love to," said Ernest. But before they could glide off into the waltz, Crump stepped to Ernest's side and said,

"Beg pardon, sir, but there is somebody here to see you."

"To see me, Crump?" exclaimed Ernest. "Are you sure, Crump?"

"Certain, sir. They said they were friends from America."

"Friends from America?" repeated the mystified Ernest. "Who could they possibly be?"

"The names they gave me," said Crump. "Are Mr. and Mrs. Otis Wyncoop, Master Wyncoop, and Mrs. Clara-Maria Phelps."

Keeps Peace In Desert

Major Glubb Has One Of The Strangest Jobs In The World
 "The Younger Lawrence of Arabia," as they call Major J. B. Glubb, has one of the strangest jobs in the world.

Head of the Arab Legion's Desert Patrol, he has kept a watchful eye on the frontiers of Trans-Jordan for seven years, as well as dabbling in education for Bedouin children at desert outposts, improvement of inter-tribal relations, and relief of physical suffering.

Tall and heavy-featured, Major Glubb has a dark scar on his chin which earned the title "Abu Haneik" (Father of the Chin) by which he is known in the desert.

Formed in 1920 as a section of the Arab Legion, Glubb's Desert Patrol consists entirely of Bedouins. The patrols execute functions are to prevent inter-tribal raiding, protect the oil pipeline across the desert, discourage tribal interests in politics and disorders in neighboring countries, and maintain a desert intelligence service.

Major Glubb is responsible only to King Faisal, commanding the Arab Legion. He was already wise in desert ways when he came to Trans-Jordan from Iraq in 1930. Immediately he adopted Bedouin customs and dress, bought a tent, camels, and sheep, and travelled with nomad tribes from pasturage to pasturage.

Now he is expanding his force to three times its present strength. He hopes eventually to have near 2,500 men. The Arab Legion, the parent organization, has 42 officers and 1,062 men, with headquarters at Amman.

Deplore Use Of Eire

Officials In Dublin Think Ireland Would Be Better

If you want to make teeth grin in official circles in Dublin be sure to use the word Eire, instead of Ireland. Increasing use abroad of the term Eire to describe the 26-county area under the jurisdiction of Dublin is officially deplored and would fail to describe feelings at seeing the terms Eirishman or Anglo-Eirish circles.

Just before the new constitution came into operation the government notified the League of Nations the title of the country would in future be Eire in the Irish language, but it seems everyone prefers to use the Irish word.

Those who object to using the word Ireland on the ground it may give rise to misunderstanding while six counties are still part of the United Kingdom are asked: But is Germany any the less German without Eupen and Malmedy or would England cease to be England if Yorkshire hopped out?

Headline writers, however, will find it difficult to abandon Eire. Some of them here hailed the new word with the title of the country in the newspapers.

Queen Mary

Now Planning To Cut Down On Her Personal Engagements

Queen Mary planning to cut down her public engagements, become more than ever the discreet Queen-Mother in the background of court life and not an official figure in the full glare of the limelight.

Since the death of George V, and the abdication of Edward VIII, Queen Mary has taken more than her full share in the doings of the Court and the responsibilities of the Throne, with the sole object of assisting and guiding her sons. Her grasp of affairs and her physical endurance in trying times have amazed all her friends, particularly in the last three years.

Now Queen Mary feels that George VI and Queen Elizabeth are firmly established in the affection of all Britons, and she is preparing to "fade out." This decision has been made by Queen Mary herself after long talks with her friends and confidants, and with Court advisers, including the Prime Minister. Queen Mary will now have more time to spend with friends and her grandchildren, to whose upbringing and education she intends to devote herself.—British Cavalade.

Crocodiles Damage Boats

Imperial Airways Obligated To Substitute Steel Type For Rubber

Because crocodiles do not know the difference between red rubber and liver, Imperial Airways' research department has been obliged to invent a new type of buoy for mooring flying boats at Malakal, Kampala, Kisumu, Raj Samant and other places in Africa and India.

The old mooring device was a huge ball of red rubber, anchored by means of hooks at the end of a steel chain. Rubber was used because it was soft and did not damage the hulls of flying boats. The buoys were painted red so they would be visible at a distance.

Suddenly they started disappearing. Investigations revealed the buoys, which were hollow, were at the bottom of the lake. Crocodiles, presumably mistaking them for raw liver, had chewed holes in them, causing them to sink.

The proposed new type is a steel cylinder protected by a semi-pneumatic fender, impervious to the teeth of crocodiles.

Shot Rare White Rhino

Farmer In South Africa Had To Pay Heavy Fine

The shooting in Zululand of one of the rarest animals in the world has been the subject of court proceedings, and a South African farmer has been fined $200. The rare animal was a white rhino, one of two which strayed on to a farm near Babanango.

The farmer said he was called out by his terrified natives, none of whom had seen such a beast before. He found two enormous beasts grazing peacefully among his cattle. As he raised his rifle he saw they had horns on their noses, and it occurred to him that they might be rhinos. He fired at the bigger of the two and both came trotting towards him. He ran for his life and climbed the nearest tree. He fired 10 shots until the bigger animal staggered and dropped.

The white rhino is the second rarest beast in the world, the okapi being first. It is found only in Zululand.

Big Car Order

140 New Stream-Lined Cars For the Queen City

Chairman William C. McBrien of the Toronto Transportation Commission, announced the purchase of 140 new stream-lined street cars at a cost of $3,000,000 for delivery next August. The cars will be built by Canadian Car and Foundry Company. The cars are the latest designed by the Automobile Transit Association and will be almost noiseless in operation. Eventually, McBrien said, 300 wooden cars will all be replaced by the new models.

Want To Remain Austrians
 Austrians exiled in Paris have formed the "Austrian-Aid Association." These former subjects of Austria do not wish to become Germans and are applying to the French Government to give them a legal status and permit them to call themselves "Austrians." They have promised to refrain from politics if they are allowed to remain in France, in the hope that some day their country may be revived.

Prospector Finds Fortune

Root Of Abandoned Shaft Led To Pocket Of Gold

News of the 69-year-old prospector who has won a fortune from a barren and almost inaccessible mountain side in Swaziland has just been received in Durban, South Africa.

The prospector is A. M. Burnett, and within two months he banked some $90,000—and he is still digging gold out of the dirt. He stumbled across Devil's Reef, an old shaft running into a mountain-side in the Figg's Peak district, which gets its name from a nearby village where $5,000,000 worth of gold was won nearly 20 years ago.

Devil's Reef yielded about $250,000 before the rich pocket was lost many years ago. Mr. Burnett found the shaft, which is about 30 feet long and six feet high, and decided to try his luck. He found signs of gold on the sides and in the floor, nothing in payable quantities. Then he had a brainwave and tried the roof.

That was the start of his fortune, for he discovered the long-lost pocket of gold. Leaving the shaft, he started another about 30 feet higher and began to dig out shovelful of gold-bearing earth.

Just Be Nonchalant

Advice Given By Professor Regarding Attitude Toward Bees

Be nonchalant in the presence of a bee, and the chances are you won't sting you, Dr. E. J. Dyce, professor of agriculture of the Ontario Agricultural College, told a service club at Windsor, Ont. Dr. Dyce warned that a mere flicker of an eye lash may irritate a bee's curiosity, and lead him to "sit down" on one's face.

With summer picnics coming on it is worthwhile remembering that grasping the stinger of a bee to pull it from the skin merely squeezes a syringe of venom into the wound, and leads to the flesh, increasing the irritation, said Dr. Dyce. Snipping off the end of the stinger cuts short the depth of the sting, and amount of poison injected.

Hikers Prepare for Rockies' Sky-Line Trails

INVADING the domain of the mountain goats, adventure-loving Canadians and Americans will tramp the Sky-Line Trail in the Yoho Valley district of the Canadian Rockies this summer from August 5 to 8. The Sky-Line Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies have a unique organization. It is open to the world at large. The only qualifications are a love of beauty, a sturdy pair of boots, and the will to leave the main roads for the undiscovered charms of the back country.

Indications are that a gay band of adventurers will invade the beautiful Yoho Valley this summer from Banff Springs Hotel, Chateau Lake Louise and the several attractive Canadian Pacific chalet-bungalows—camps in the Canadian Rockies. From one central camp spectacularly situated half way between Yoho Lodge and Emerald Lake north of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the hikers will explore along the high line, visit the fossil beds on the slopes of Mount Burgess, inspect the snowy moraine of the Yoho Glacier and pick flowers in the bird-haunted alpine meadows of Little Yoho Valley. The district has much to offer. The hikers will have opportunities to fish for fighting mountain trout, to hunt big game with camera, to get away from the ordinary humdrum for four glorious days of mountain life.

This type of holiday, so unusual and yet so inexpensive because of the organization formed by hiking enthusiasts, is attracting more people every year. The secretary-treasurer, J. Murray Gibson, Windsor Station, Montreal, reports that the number of inquiries already received indicates that there will be a record turn-out of old and new members this year. The picture layout shows highlights of a typical hike.
